School Coordinator, SPRS
K.R. Mangalam University

“Welcome to the School of Physiotherapy and Rehabilitation Sciences. As you embark on the rewarding journey as a healthcare professional, I wish you the best for enjoying the journey as well as the destination”.

Dear Students,

Physiotherapy is more than a profession—it is a service and a passion to improve the quality of life of a patient. It is with this philosophy that I envision the students of SPRS at K. R. Mangalam University to contribute towards society. Physiotherapy has expanded in its scope tremendously over the years and is now an integral part of the healthcare industry. Spanning from prevention to treatment to rehabilitation, physiotherapists have a role to play in every stage of life. The pandemic has also contributed to the realisation of the importance of health and physical fitness among people, and the need for a skilled workforce of healthcare professionals has been further augmented. At SPRS, we are committed to ensuring that students are not only equipped with the requisite knowledge and skills required for the profession, but also maximise their potentials to be future leaders.

The innovative pedagogical techniques used in the School of Physiotherapy and Rehabilitation Sciences have already set a benchmark in physiotherapy education in the region, with appreciation from external experts, examiners, industry partners and academic luminaries. With a special focus on skill-based, hands-on training and exposure to state-of-the-art technology and research throughout their journey, students are ready for the future. On the other hand, with health camps, rural case studies and collaborations with NGOs, they are also rooted towards their community and appreciate their role in society as compassionate, ethical professionals.
