EDUCATION FOR SUSTAINABALE DEVELOPMENT
UNESCO, 2014
"Education for Sustainable Development allows every human being to acquire the knowledge, skills, attitudes and values necessary to shape a sustainable future. Education for Sustainable Development means including key sustainable development issues into teaching and learning; for example, climate change, disaster risk reduction, biodiversity, poverty reduction, and sustainable consumption.
It also requires participatory teaching and learning methods that motivate and empower learners to change their behaviour and take action for sustainable development. Education for Sustainable Development consequently promotes competencies like critical thinking, imagining future scenarios and making decisions in a collaborative way.

Long Journey Ahead.....
Inclusion is not a utopian dream, which leads to inclusive societies overnight
Conflicting views, contradictions, war, inequality will perhaps stay
The challenge is to work collectively and find contextual options to address exclusion

Support Services: Providing academic and non-academic support services, such as tutoring, counseling, and childcare, can help students overcome challenges and succeed in their studies.
Curricular Relevance: Higher education institutions should adapt their curricula to address current and future sustainability challenges. This might involve integrating sustainability-related courses, research projects, and experiential learning opportunities.
Community Engagement: Universities should engage with their local communities to address local sustainable development challenges. This can include collaborating with community organizations, conducting research on local issues, and offering service-learning opportunities.
Research for Sustainability: Universities play a vital role in research and innovation for sustainable development. Encouraging faculty and students to conduct research that addresses global and local sustainability challenges is crucial.
Global Perspective: Higher education institutions should promote a global perspective on sustainability, emphasizing the interconnectedness of environmental, social, and economic challenges. This can involve international collaborations and exchange programs.
Monitoring and Evaluation: Regularly assessing and monitoring the inclusivity and sustainability of higher education programs is essential. Data-driven insights can help identify areas for improvement and measure progress toward sustainable development goals.
