The School of Humanities organized an event titled “Alumni Talk on Intrapreneurship as a Mindset for Driving Innovation” at K.R. Mangalam University on February 11, 2025. The event explored how adopting an intrapreneurial mindset can drive innovation and create value within organizational settings. Through real-world examples and success stories of successful intrapreneurial ventures, the session inspired participants and equipped them with practical strategies and skills to foster and sustain intrapreneurial thinking for long-term growth and impact.

Objective of the Event

The objective of the event was to explore how intrapreneurial thinking can drive innovation and create value within organizational settings. It aimed to inspire participants by sharing real-world examples and success stories of intrapreneurial endeavors, showcasing the impact of proactive and creative problem-solving within organizations. Additionally, the event sought to equip participants with practical strategies and essential skills to foster an intrapreneurial mindset, empowering them to contribute to sustainable growth and innovation in their professional environments.

Event Proceedings

The event commenced with a warm welcome and an insightful introductory address by Prof. Renu Verma, Associate Dean, School of Humanities (SOHS). She highlighted the importance of intrapreneurship in today's dynamic work environments, illustrating its impact with real-life examples of individuals who drove innovation within their organizations. She encouraged students to adopt an intrapreneurial mindset, emphasizing how proactive thinking and creativity can open new avenues for growth and success.

Following the welcome address, Ms. Arshleen Sodhi, an alumna from the 2021–2024 batch (Economics) and currently working as a Public Speaking Coach, took the stage. She delivered an engaging talk on the "I" in intrapreneurship, guiding students through practical steps they can take to become intrapreneurs within their academic and professional journeys. Her session provided actionable insights on personal initiative, problem-solving, and leveraging individual strengths to contribute meaningfully to organizational goals.

Next, Ms. Adrija Mukherjee, an alumna from the 2022–2024 batch (MA Psychology, KRMU) and a dedicated educator and guidance counselor, led an interactive session on the 8-step process of intrapreneurship. She captivated the audience with her relatable approach, walking participants through each stage of the process while fostering an open dialogue. Her ability to connect with the students created a lively atmosphere, encouraging curiosity and deeper understanding of intrapreneurial practices.

The event concluded with a heartfelt vote of thanks by Dr. Srishti Srivastava, Assistant Professor, Political Science, SOHS, who expressed gratitude to the speakers, organizers, and attendees for their enthusiastic participation. The closing remarks were delivered by Dr. Nudrat Jahan, School Coordinator, SOHS, who felicitated the guest speakers with tokens of appreciation, marking the end of a truly enriching and inspiring session.

Outcomes and Impact

The event received an enthusiastic response from over 70 students of the School of Humanities (SOHS), eager to connect with alumni and gain insights into intrapreneurship. Interactive discussions encouraged active participation, with students posing thoughtful questions and exploring innovation in their future workplaces.

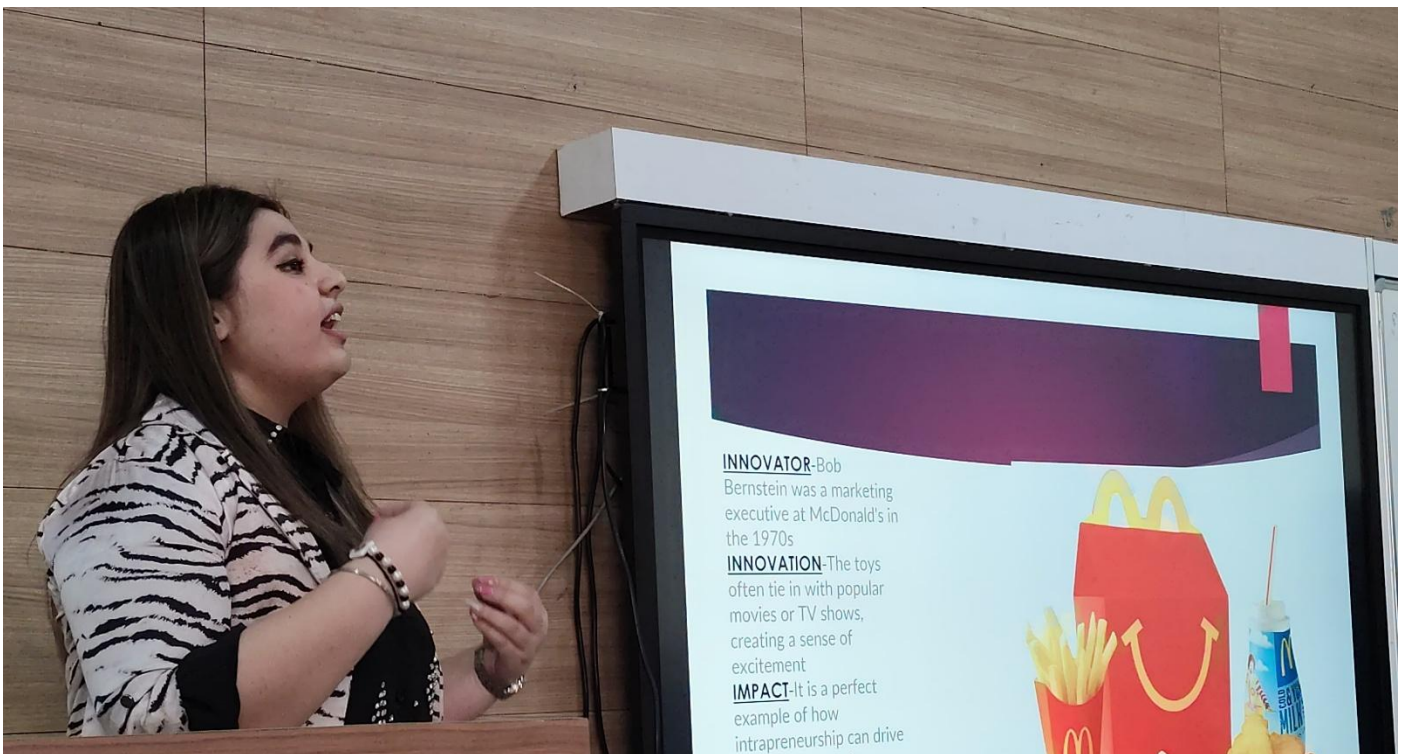

The sessions emphasized the importance of an intrapreneurial mindset, inspiring students to take initiative and seek growth opportunities. Beyond practical strategies, the event strengthened alumni-student connections, fostering a supportive network for mentorship and knowledge sharing.

Key Outcomes:

- Enhanced Understanding of Intrapreneurship: Participants gained valuable insights into intrapreneurship and its role in driving innovation.
- Skill Development: Students acquired practical skills in creativity, problem identification, and effectively communicating innovative ideas.

- Interactive Learning: The event encouraged student engagement through discussions, Q&A sessions, and reflections on intrapreneurial thinking.
- Stronger Alumni-Student Bond: Meaningful interactions enriched learning and laid the foundation for ongoing mentorship and networking.

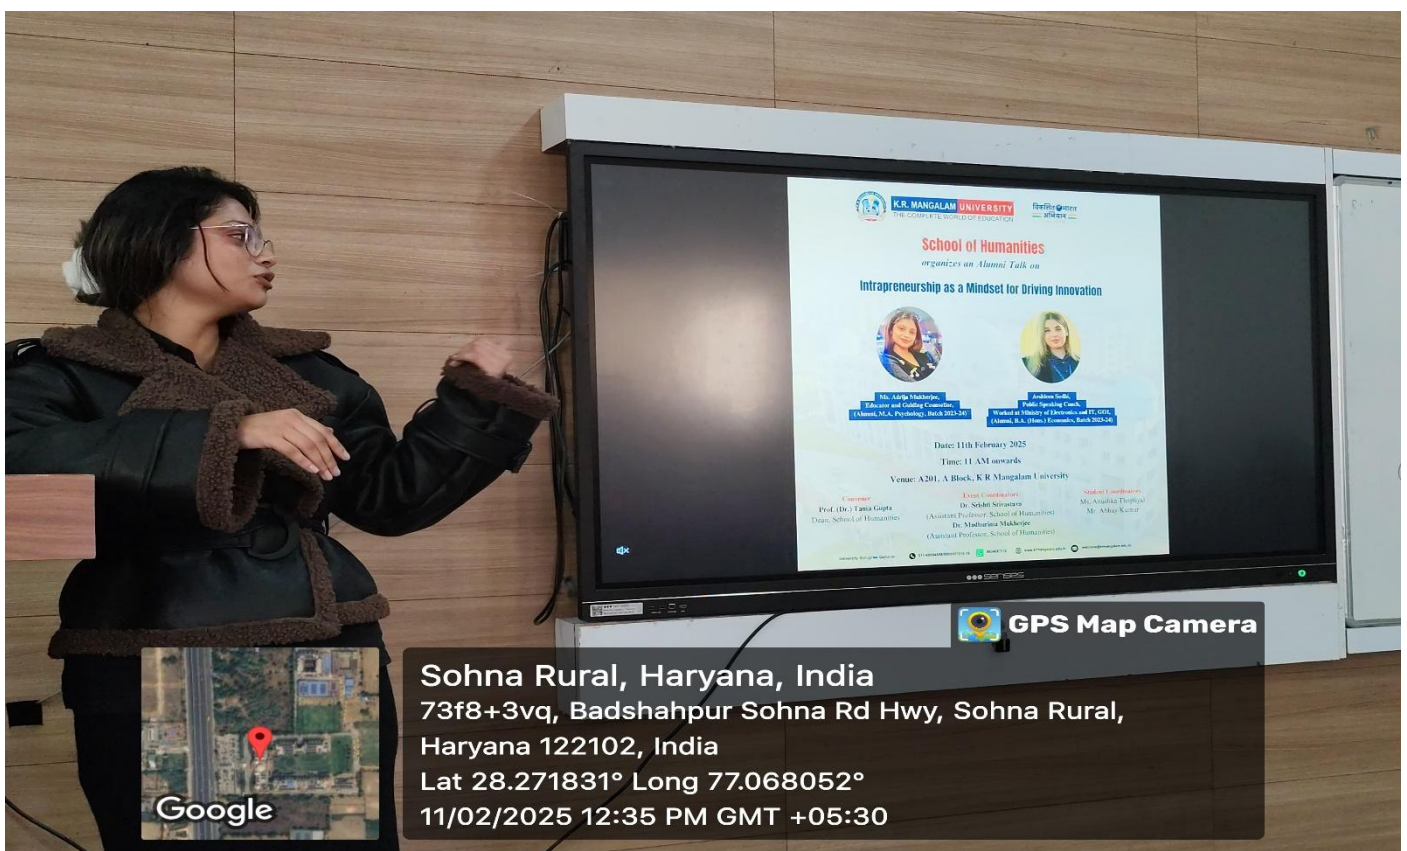

The event empowered students to apply intrapreneurial principles in their careers, fostering innovation and leadership. Alumni interactions reinforced the value of continuous learning, encouraging students to embrace proactive growth in their professional journeys.
