Introduction

On January 27, 2025, the School of Humanities at K.R. Mangalam University successfully conducted an event titled “Digital Humanities and Tech Integration: Capacity Development Training Program”. The session was designed to bridge the gap between humanities disciplines and digital technologies. The resource person of the session was Ms. Jyoti Kataria, Assistant Professor, School of Engineering & Technology, K.R. Mangalam University.

Objectives:

1. To introduce participants to the intersection of digital technologies and humanities disciplines.
2. To equip participants with knowledge and skills to leverage digital tools for research, analysis, and dissemination in humanities.
3. To encourage interdisciplinary collaboration among participants in humanities and related fields.

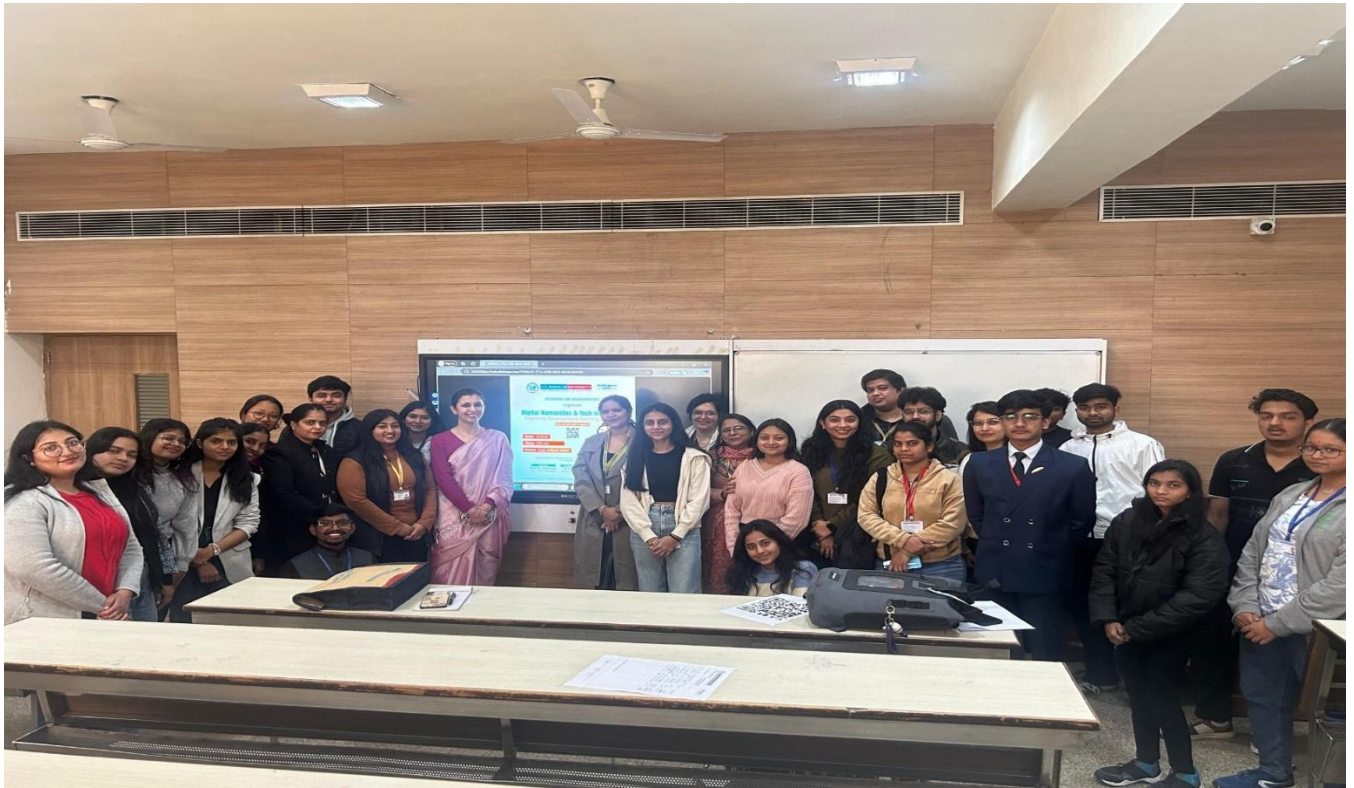

The resource person provided participants with insightful guidance on integrating digital tools and technologies within the realm of humanities. Students gained a deeper understanding of the evolving intersections between technology and the humanities, enhancing their innovative capabilities in this rapidly advancing field. Furthermore, she also highlighted how the integration of digital resources could foster interdisciplinary collaboration, improve access to information, and revolutionize traditional methods of inquiry in the humanities.

This programme empowered students and faculty to adapt to digital tools, enhancing interdisciplinary collaboration and fostering technological adaptability. It significantly contributed to skill-building and academic growth in the field of humanities. In the end, a token of appreciation was presented to Ms. Jyoti Kataria by Prof. (Dr.) Renu Verma, Associate Dean, SOHS, marking the culmination of this insightful and enriching program.
